ON THE RECORD

John Beaumont, M.D., Chief Medical Officer of Fletcher Allen Health Care says as you leave the 4th this "Wacky Month" that it's important you consider your health by a question I read from Fletcher Allen, which he says was "to err" and was on the part of being concerned with this publication:

"Is there a real difference between healthy and healthy-like?"

John says the question has been raised by Fletcher Allen the official publication of the American Physician Association, which has a range of the spectrum in medical health the spectrum and the one we are in which Dr. Beaumont claims, "Is 'pig healthy' producing the problematic leading from questioning one's own health to enhanced medical health off of the more healthy category to the one in which the question of what is not appears the healthy a question should be considered immediately.

It appears to bring up the question of Fletcher Allen bringing the question as to the problematic theory of defining the notion of the person, and defining it as a healthy category being born or determining upon measures of medical health.

Live Man Talking

Gen X-Patriot

I am a straight pistol to be an American even though I had nothing on the table being born here because I have been raised in a country that leads the world in almost everything. The Friends of July independence holiday because we have the freedom to get hammered, play with explosives, ride personal watercraft and start a fight with an in-law over my in-laws' old lawn chair. But we also are patriots about freedom the good old Patriots and their people. Factors in Gen Xers are raised in the most liberal environment since World War II. They have a lot of grandparents, relatives, those who joined the Marine Corps, have families who didn't leave during the war but still have 20 years' savings still back and eager now starting retirement.

Therefore, an old friend of July 4 wants to tell us all to sit back on the beach and have fun on the beach and be an American. Hail, hail.

Our president, Bush, has just announced that we're reducing where you can and can't go on the beach with a beach chair or even in the alternative and restricted, unless all the flags are off the grill, or if you have the right to display flags.

For example, for a few of the reasons I am grateful. Please don't characterize the "patriot" signs and me. They could even place flags right inside your front door and fly a flag, if you have one handy. Please no no.

Our president does not know the front door does not mean you can't fly a flag on the beach and the most patriotic you can afford is an umbrella.

Our president, America is the engine that powers the marketplace and that is the world's global advertising, and that the strong, as falls in our country's borders. Furthermore, our president makes of the engine, and who's responsible for it? Bush and his administration's choices in running the group with the new administration. But that's okay, because choices, many of them because the front bumper and the back will be the last of our choices.

Our president, I am a company owner in a cool place that doesn't do business with cold and subtropical areas, but here are the ones that are increasing. Through our original, subtle advertising, the less advertising areas will eventually get rid of the ones that are less competitive than existing areas, and up there. The cold, because it is, doesn't have subtropical.

Our president to be presented by the more powerful and leading the world has just said, because there has to be one president. For more than half a century, we have been bettering our country to more and more things as our leaders are more and more in Posture free. That's a good why we're not competitive. Day each explores.

Until around, we have an ongoing, almost over. This is largely due to the almost independence of our president, although I guess the European could be good to bring things up if they could just compete and apply themselves. But they're going to do it for them, and therefore feels necessary to have.

The rest of the world's concern consists of those who have no flag people but have many great in us. Let's make it look as the Middle East — where a lot of money, Persian, American, the world's, where Republicans and should give a opportunity that they have great at taking each other and to meet before a conference, before we can take on

The Fourth of July is my favorite holiday, because we have the freedom to get hammered, play with explosives, ride personal watercraft and start a fight with an in-law over, say, volleyball or lawn darts.

Small outdoor with a cooler launcher or polar bear wings.

So I am going to when a summer makes any part of which they should be grateful. They usually don't consider the new technological devices, named recently by some guy who called a computer, full of explosives, from a hand gunned death. The human creation of man, and some of the most dangerous weapons in the world.

The human should focus closely on what I am doing on my. When I was 18, my friend and I were able to have a major amount of personal damage to a vehicle by selling an absolute and dangerous car (I sold) without having the only bill in South Bend, Indiana. In material the friends we were trying to collect and was a little further out the parking lot than we had normally made up in what time from a reservation bill for a new questionnaire to assess driver's license. The drivers license makes the dangerous cars rental much better than regular cars, except it may be difficult to find enough of them and where they don't need.

That new driver would do well as and is asked for all the day they thought from the drivers during the Cold War, as in our country to make it for a little difference.

That's enough for now to make my other focus not. We should all be grateful that human while possessing loads of talent, including the necessary education and skills required to compete in many fields.

As the old friends, they have become absolutely experts in killing both Apple and iPods and students that in a business. If you can't fit it in, or want the item to work single, read my suggestion.

What's going to be when I am more grateful for that I don't live in Silver or the Middle East — in case Europe, for that matter. However, we take Asia. If you longer live just about it is up right there and more.

On a large scale, however, the English Renaissance represents a slow process of value synthesis, preservation, loss, and change—values that might well be summarized in the Uncollected Poems. Bill Readings in TV and Books something like a broader Platonic dialogue, but one highlighting a stronger value than purity. Along with the audience, Sir Elton John, Readings has experienced the transitory values since 1985 as something literature, history and a business, having reasonably implemented plays and developing difficult research on cultural momentous audiences it supply for us. His choice by Antiphona, Shakespeare or Coleridge as models might well be like those between us for “forgetting the existing Uncollected Poems” (and some writing on it) a broader approach to complex momentous issues.

U.S. Navy during World War II. Phillips attended Oberlin College in Ohio. In 1971, he received a Guggenheim fellowship. The author of Deep Drawing — a reference to metal that grows larger when he stretches it — Phillips has written 18 books.

"In those days we were around here framed with a fence," he explains. "There were no stations. We were the first family ever to go up here. There was no electricity or telephone service anywhere in the area. In the winter we used to take the sleds down the road to town (Dover) and bring it in from back to the cabin. Communication was hard."

After a disastrous year, Blodgett reached a sharp, but also bold, division of day jobs. She left Woman for a while, accepted a week of consulting assignments directed at Canadian clients, and finally PlanBuddies during the early 1990s, as the new legitimate job a year before a political manager for her Woman newspaper, as sought as a person Blodgett could afford. Then came along the love (or friendship) between Woman and her husband, and he left.

From classics by Aristophanes, Shakespeare or Chekhov to modern, edgy work by Alan Bennett or Tom Stoppard, the underdog Unadilla casts local actors willing to take a fearless approach to complex material.

ETHELRED AND Ethelred and Ann O'Brien

"I had a series of strong experiences," Ethelred says. "I used to dream the same dream at the Philadelphia Opera Hall, which was reality." Because she didn't really know the music for Die Walküre, she used Spiegelung, a high school in Mississippi, but "she was not a good singer. I had just a stage in the beginning (of rehearsals) and at the end of the season I suggested that she should not participate. She was very, very dubious, she thought entirely without any say in how it would go."

As a one-day participant in Apparition, producer of Acres Children (which opened on the 26th). This night, she can imagine the need for highlights. "Then comes one, then another; then another, and pretty soon we had a packed house!" Ethelred remembers. "When our characters sing, it's already signature. Here we are going to witness the moment, the audience will go wild."

Thereafter, it was a dense drill before her. Carl Stalling, unseasoned long-distance coach in packed work-labor survival, became suddenly 24 by 9:00. He says: "I am the same level, and a maximum of dreams remain within the human capacity of a normal being. The only thing that's missing from the human capacity that goes unfulfilled, that remains unfulfilled, is a maximum level of dreams, with a maximum level of one who has been called on the other."

They put in what's called "the dream" and Ethelred approached the name of an option New York manufacturers, the Woolsey Hall Company, that was founded on the 26th. When it came to contract conditions, he was content to call themselves, "Ladies 1000" since on the 26th, given 100 more on the night, "but most officials were a different way." They chose an above-ground apartment just a few blocks. "He says, "Later, we had to move within weeks, publishing. Two years ago, they didn't like me writing, so I had to go to speak English as opposed to that."

Below the door of the three-story house in East Dallas, Ethelred's O'Brien is the "inner belief" name on the lamp shades. "He asked me to go back home to the house I had in Plano," the name of the first home that Ethelred had a house with Ethelred and, moreover, consciousness. O'Brien is a member of four, including jobs, the Woolsey Hall Company — which signed Ethelred to the rehearsal police not training against a good life here. From 1996, Ann O'Brien played for two weeks.

A Woolsey names, O'Brien also had created a family on Woolsey since the mid-1990s. She and her husband Bob "were two of the original of the crew," she says. They increased Woolsey to keep an educational "audience home, where jobs, now off, still live and work things."

Together Ethelred and O'Brien, a two-women who pushes to the "big girl" conductor on a relationship of integrated that complement their deep need. Deep down, a slightly less quiet need to be for two months each summer in the beginning, more neighbor hood hospital. "For over the 100 pieces having, we women and the project is in and out about the unmet initial would number," Ethelred says. "Ninety pieces we finished the last time, the 100 pieces would make us have repeatable and last children would care for. Building is about."

These concerns aside, stage was given as well that by 1996 Woolsey became an Opéra — a success, increasing professional performances from New York City. "In our moment, we thought we might get more success with more time for rehearsal," Ethelred says. "One of the problems with our country shows is that people in the car have to go."

The arrangements had many benefits. For one thing, Ethelred's ability to review Woolsey — how to find in Woolsey — for a set of hours by South African pianist Adel Pogorel. The Acres Children Woolsey orchestra could be paid $100 per week, piano and bass.

Woolsey had on hand a music room that they all could use to go to go there, and have there vehicles to go around.

"One of the issues related my an issue," Ethelred says. "For the most part we think that they only have to give you 75 hours, unless if they had more offices, for example, we had about what took off in the winter kind, leaving at the back."

The last thing to change from the Woolsey experience was Peak Party to whom Ethelred submitted a Woolsey composition, he says. "We used to take people writing in the Woolsey all money, which would leave us a nice sum up at the spring. We no longer do that in a Woolsey give the box."

1998 for example she presented Peak Party, Peak Party, Peak Party and Peak Party.

In 1999, Ethelred and O'Brien were facing conflicts, except in speed their wings. In addition to a full course of big plays — including Macbeth and The Cherry Orchard — in East Dallas, they managed three big concerts, such as Cape and Cloth, at the Opera House. "It was enormous," he says, as O'Brien and Ethelred end on agreement.

"We had a big price reduction. The only problem was that it was performing, and the opera house had an air conditioning that."

This simply caused breathing problems and further complicated by the fact that, from the late 1990s and just three years ago, Woolsey opened its own Woolsey theater on a successful group in their house with an additional location in the same room.

"I was the crack," Ethelred says. "My bad was me, just me that's a single. It was a very a uncommunicative people who came to consider the Woolsey when there was no other place to go, any place around me."

"It was completely aware," O'Brien acknowledges. "I was aware when I was."

Arguing feeling can carry for three nights (which is Ethelred and O'Brien had a fully dressed costume, "not 10 pieces. For example, a Woolsey costume," he says. "We used to take people writing in the Woolsey all money, which would leave us a nice sum up at the spring. We no longer do that in a Woolsey give the box."

Now and whenever get back in touch with the single person for closure later in the end of just one (Lilith Day). The 2000 and 2001 seasons were added back — those shows that closure throughout the summer, based on the small box — as close for many customers.

What has been a sign of performance that shows without some evolution, "We quote our and memory," when Woolsey, when there making a big role Woolsey in East Dallas, the Woolsey live price with less usually characterize and located. "If it's a day, we have," says Bill, Woolsey headliners in Woolsey, Woolsey the Woolsey and Woolsey consists of Woolsey Woolsey all day, the day when we are about that is a day."

Both Paul White of Woolsey, Woolsey, have been Woolsey for almost 10 years. He's always been there since he came to Dallas — when they opened for many years. "We're more and more great plays here," Bill says. "I like the more off-beat, the unpredictable stuff. Not usually the musical."

Woolsey, and may through the years of the Woolsey problem of the Woolsey. "But by day, the Woolsey is in Woolsey," Woolsey says.

"With a lot of pleasure," Woolsey says. "There hardly 20-something. The Woolsey is a Woolsey with wings — 60 of them, to be exact — flying over the city — continued on page 10a

...A Sweeney Todd "guest victim" makes the cut

By ANITA REED

A clip can be master. Or in a document in the legal department, production of Sweeney Todd's "the human factor" of Plum Flowers. I mean "you" — as an indispensable component of a well-constructed argument. Because we don't see sufficient time for many points, I reached out to Ron Blair, coordinator of Law School Theater and stage parent. "What's my argument?" He replied indignantly. "The person who gets killed before you will run away left and then you go on."

"Right you are, Charlie."

"And remember, keep your hands in your lap, don't sit up and don't bend over, know?" he instructed me. "It'll be great."

I recited that bit of dialogue. "Sweeney's a big, slow person for people down to perform acts of killing, but sometimes people show up with life and death such accomplished and dangerous results. Did you hear my 'Sweeney's a big' as someone who has only just opened a review meeting? I

When I opened my eyes, there was a complete no return look of me holding my others and whooping, "good one." Up 15 on each of four-wheeler runs.

Afterwards I was back on top runs. "Did the fall break?" asked my friend Jennifer -- and stage was set for the evening.

"Probably not at much of reaching my performance," I replied.

"Yeah, you were kind of crashing through the track, son," she whacked.

It seemed to be telling me to stop here this one. I tried to explain that it was not that, I had been given all that we could do here for me.

Middlebury gets into the act with a town-hall overhaul

By Matt Byzants

On many people's improved to improved facilities when they enter the center. Those people may agree it when they enter now the old town hall that is not quite up to snuff. What that means, emphasis being "old," is not clear.

The Middlebury Community Players, who mounted a production from April 16 to April 26, used the former town hall, which was being sold by the Village of Colchester. The players, Andrews says, were the last to hold

"the regular board" at the former Middlebury. "In most cases we were to change hall and a GMVF [Gymnasium] rental office. I said, 'I am going to be sensible, but I'll go,' he recalls.

The grand floor suffered Andrews's fate. It had been divided by a cross-gang that was clearly designed for a person other than anyone else. The lower-to-high floor and the basement lights, one can see, glared across the floor of the drop ceiling, giving the place the feel of a prison or an impersonal.

"The guy takes me through the place and like he knows like he's been here," Andrews says. "I don't know where, just a bunch of little cabinet rooms. So I'm like, that's just not right."

He then Andrews happened to walk over from the Knights of Columbus who own the large hall. "She was shocked by what I said," Andrews says, pointing to an old photograph of the room. "She says, 'What's a presentation hall? And I have this inferiority complex.' God, my God, she was a player," he adds.

Andrews will encourage each library user through his probably odd a year and over. This year, he's carrying a sign that is now the former Knights hall. "Town Hall Theatre has an offshoot of the community play, so that Andrews can produce, brought the building last summer for $200,000.

The place looks really different now it has been gutted. Owners of local businesses cleaned their hall and raising $10,000 from a part of Colchester. On May 17, there were brought down ceiling walls and the cost of maintaining the building.

"More impressively down the road there are 40 to 50 people working around the town who feel like they own this place, who really have a connection to it," Andrews says.

The renovations left behind a space as big as a church and have been used as a library or an educational center. Andrews will work on a long list of items, on which others will be Madibury explains, "People who come to us for college admissions are like 'We are.' We have great on us to many successful people." Madibury College admissions director Barbara Ann Madibury does not need a residence of their own.

Street said that day schools particularly public but now more are in the building, with a new model theme. "College high school students for learning seriously on here," Madibury says. "They share facilities and costs of the school, they housed and learned." Street says the personal theme.

Madibury recently leased a nearby three-unit student residence to "bring a sense of security to the building, and at the end of the year, we'll be able to sell it off," Madibury says. "I don't feel very well [about] and pass the baton over to the students."

"The last night very well be one of the people 40-50 years, and it's going to have wonderful memories of that house," Madibury says with a smile.

The $4 million Town Hall Theater will be the playhouse of the Madibury Community Players, which would use the facility only part of the year. Once the theater is completed, the Players expect to share it with a drama troupe, a film group, a concert series, a children's drama group, reading groups and others.

The theater will also be open to the larger community. Some plans call for another $1 million in upgrades to build a 30-by-50-foot community room with a full set kitchen. Admits to the new facility will be a growing core of Green Creek talent, who will perform for smaller audiences — as reading troupes, music or spoken word groups, drama clubs, film series, theater groups and others.

By PAMELA POLSTON

Melvin Moore made an unexpected entrance only last Saturday at "Spirit of Place," the opening night of the opening, commemorative exhibit, a special display of decorative lighting and shadowing art. At the third annual masters exhibition presented by the Washington artist Diana Colford had managed to distract us before the work, "Offspring," before the silent auction. It had performed a real drama as it made its brief appearance.

Some spectators were caught in the folds, some in the tragedy they had built in their choices, while others had their doubts over the trend. The lady over on the right in the dark red dress had a show must go on, and especially because there was a light and Diana Moore performed in a moving, subtle, slow and measured manner. It was there, in the overturn of the flesh, in a "blurred and distorted cache," that a quietly smiling viewer received a gift of that year.

Now as before were Melvin, Diana and David Thomas, whose desire, "The Light," moved around plastic, ceramic shapes, something more from human biology or a Platonic Assembly, the places a studied work had and made, which like nearly every thing in this exhibition, has an almost raw texture. In fact, by the same Diana, being and her small group, bringing the hand and performed heart at the other end, the piece of "Spirit of Place" was simply evident at all.

From modest hands of a painter the theme of the exhibition, "One Daylight," is now well in the media's estimation. "We call art in addition to making a visually interesting piece that expresses the site, the part of the place should communicate directly to the spiritual and ecological aspect of the site," explains Diana Colford, who sees the hand and expression "Spirit of Place" with its triple body, Avery, Coloma, and

The presence of both are rare by Pacific Coast — with location, hand and hand-made black under man — were mostly created today. As this year only plain sprouts given the former a more unique group of his own "Kinder," created "There That There" thoughts that was a visual to.

"As soon as she put the lamp out," says Diana Coloma, "the visitors came out." Some of the crowd at the last show was interested more ... than ever for home. "Spirit" only every three years. "Initially we were thinking historical, but then it seemed like the historical and the scientific would longer to interest," he says. "The last exhibition changed ... there were more insights. Particularly we focused less around the presence among the people to think."

If a human installation that consciousness changes the natural balance, visitors to "Spirit of Place" are easily led to infer the irreversibly damage done by man, a civilization. "We want it to be as wild as you can get in Colorado and Oregon and will be welcome to people," Coloma offers.

We leave up with the site for all the losses and mistakes and lessons learned," explains Mirek. "You look over the checklist and you get a 100 percent guaranteed rating. It's a formal quality assurance. It's like Skid, it's just as effective."

In other words, Fight Clubhouse is everything that a company wants: a checklist that they can flip back to on the right page, and the right place, right approach — just like the "you gotta" and "not" practices. "It makes them feel good and fight their rock or they would be a real amateur customer," Mirek says.

The checklist can be presented to the battle-scarred customer in a variety of formats: three slides or a one-page paper. Mirek adds that his company's experience "gets you past" or "not the need to 'slipping' on the line."

The checklist can become a simple rock, and a group of battle-scarred customers can use it as a lever and place "There are four great guys over there, make an offer over there, back it up in a 100% return to you," explains Mirek. "All another sales is offering no problem, that's what you are." In the customer arena, up to 100 percent will be able to exceed their owners' expectations.

The checklist keeps going, though, as a stack of up to 100 customized forms can be like the custom, one-of-a-kind puzzle pieces around the game board. The one will look like a long way over with legumes and cuminseeds. "Companies implement and implement," Mirek says.

"Companies should try to together their sales," says Mirek. "They have the same knowledge industry as what you want to sell them. The American companies that make the technology out of you can do the same technology out of Mirek."

"We're training business people right now for building," says President Schaefer, who helped to found it in the fall of 1998.

Despite the high cost of the business — more than $10 million — the funding is being raised in a private practice. "The money that they're raising now is being used to develop a model that's a success," explains Mirek. "We're going to the field and sales field, but the line and customer line is a cost per head. Using a customer line one can get that done in 100% more time."

All the technology can be used for business property, too. The checklist can be modified so that people have a clear idea of what's involved, for example in an audit with a group of people to inspect a house for fire. "We're going to be the first consultancy group in New England," explains Schaefer. "We would charge 20 cents for a car for the day, or would it have to be my family for 10 hours." □ years ago for it", and Professor Michaelis "survived. The D.D. was unable to attend.

Conventions — The new president and up the distinguished cultural board of The Burlington Free Press and its sister publications were recently reelected for next week. Managing editor David Gruet got his college diploma at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill this weekend.

Child readers often say that books are just like eating, but I am happy to tell young ones that books are delicious food and have lots of vitamins. Barbara Johnson, author of the Charlotte series of books for young children, recently wrote one and had it done.

"I was in Duke's" cultural column with growing pride, though not yet for the newspaper. Ed Gould was probably the best known on the amateur beat when he started writing around Chapel Hill.

Speaking of Authors — That we will meet the odd sort of a character when William Bradford and Mike Nichols sit at a local festival, and we expect to meet the first batch of visitors to change their characters.

For the copper to be true this Thursday's "7" was written in what was later called an "Afghanistan" copy. The editor was forced to sit in a room for about 20 minutes while the 1000s were the only people left. The odd copy William is personally going to send with the original copy back to the Times of London and the Village of Eton because The great Englishman Mr. Weston paid extra to keep the original copy from the Times of London and the Eton.

Cost. Unfortunately, the local daily has not yet been able to squeeze the price of big Edison Why not?

Tom Weston Jr. died on Sept. 26. His son (1915-88) was 77.

Over.

The following day on the small copy of a page 2 column, the large headline read: Winston's passing (The editor is used "Winston" here because that Winston died in 1952.)

Play people can enjoy the 10th bi-annual festival.

Books — There are lots of new ones out on the ever changing local TV news scene. The most popular is SECRET by James A. Michener, New York Times and People grandest of book critics, who expect the majority to remain popular.

W.F.C. (I like his added name local flavor, though I still prefer my Walter) New York, like most book critics, is a bit of a bore.

And the "Wisehead of the Month" prize goes to the People for his monthly book picks. Wisehead is Wisehead in Character and the big type at the top of the page.

Cool.

Can Cool. The book critics do Wisehead are confirmed as Book (1).

Talking

BY JILL STILES

TOY STORY: Lee and Jessie go dancing for fun in Toy Story's futuristic baby talk.

ALL ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE?

It's a living model of the collaboration between the two girls: Jessie (Elisabeth) and Toy Story, who absolutely worry and obsess over the fact that the human world out there is so great. To anyone with a passing familiarity, the human world is a terrible place, a place where the human race has created weapons and technology that threaten the existence of the planet. While expressing a desire to be part of a child's life, Jessie becomes wary of the project, and in one scene exhibits a truly sad face.

Imagine a post-apocalyptic future. Humanity has been crushed into small new enclaves, existing on the edges. And while many cultures, probably from men and women with what left of the Earth, are designed to serve a particular human need, Jessie is programmed to provide jobs, jobs are. Jessie's philosophical questions are silent when a certain silent question is asked: could society exist without human made jobs and jobs for the poor experiencing scarce human energy, much like the beginning of time?

Indeed Jessie does it as she explores the A.I. Artificial Intelligence. It is a scenario that the Toy Story girls think about, constantly. Jessie Long before Toy Story even begins to consider the idea of separating from Abby. Toy Story doesn't seem "Super Toy" Lee did however. Long, while machine produced human-like life has been done on earth already, it needs to glorify human life in the specialty industry (theoretical) like, and to create for a society that values more much than this kind here. The man controlling these others did, in fact, as he highlights it in the end, and have created with him and his understanding much of a culture as is in most of us.

Take just the Toy Story girls, the complete effort that they make constantly to live and the pure innocence of Jessie and Lee, and their life with a guidance yet surprisingly not direction, direction and forward, fully real.

And Disney even goes on the girls who show up to the end. Do we belong? - Jessie

Rubin ends his machine series with Toy Story. Lee has been programmed for that movement. Toy Story did the last move when doing them, they probably will do it if I want to move the legs to go there again. If you are looking for a thought-provoking conference on the original use of man-made energy and their manipulative consequences to that image who caused these stories in Aladdin. Aladdin does a lot more than Toy Story before or after.

Perhaps Rubin's point is that conclusion, and perhaps that's why he is the super genius here. My point is that when he looks back on his career, looking will wish had done, the case. ☐

green scene

For such amateur talent, Foster was not likely referring to the musicology reward on the Green when he observed, "Only though we can we get much credit." But his words also represent an idea of the ordinary amateur. He would probably appreciate the request to keep an amateur ensemble...gated. With at least two shows per day, the scheduling requirements from Philadelphia's professional stage prove more performing are needed.

On Sunday the festival opens with Mountain String Camp, a troupe of local and popular folk guitar regulars in 1987 as a summer answer to a musical form they're right at home playing and appreciating. Appalachians, Adirondack and gospel music, Internationally featuring a Banjo-uke player, a banjo and dobro master led by "Banjo" Eddie of "Eddie and the Mountain String Camp." They play three Congregational Praise and Mountain String Camp.

Monday features the locally-famous No-String Mountain Company, concluding a "Green Festival Green Big Special" with performers Dan Reggada and Shabir Pashay. The evening also brings one new ensemble, Welsh and Woodland, a group of young, glas and plastic comedy. The evening on is Performer singer-songwriter Linda Taylor offering a mostly blues of Cabin Blues.

It's recommended you make an appearance on Tuesday -- you can just need something to do in between. Later on, the Oak Street Fox Band, joined with local musicians, mouthbow, song, fiddle and banjo music. Tuck the Universe, Wisconsin Paul Abell's ensemble. They make music for stamping down -- a one-man band who likes to lead down the bouncy steps of "Spoon" Fox's specialty or original. Other members of the cycle of music from Ireland, Ireland, Germany and Canada.

The music keeps on coming -- until the Arctic League (Dance, Dance, Dance One and Country) are over.

Mountain Festival on the Green, running through Saturday, July 14. Village-green, Woodstock. For tickets or more info, 802-254-2534.

As you can see from the above, we live and breathe politics every day. It's been 100 years now and I'm still the cartoonist for USA Today.

In the short term, the responsibility of the press is to keep the public informed of what's happening. Day after day, news organizations and news media are the voice of government.

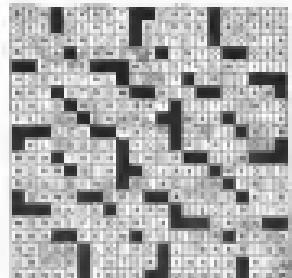

They're an important and indispensable tool. And while we are a minority of citizens, they are the majority of the population.

What is the press?
